

Give shorebirds

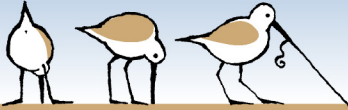

space on the beach!

www.raincoasteducation.org

MAGNET

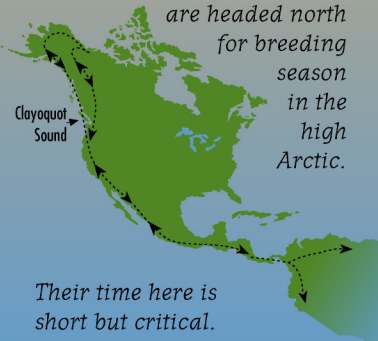

Love 'em & Leave 'em Alone

Did you know?

In spring and fall, thousands of migrating shorebirds depend on local beaches and mudflats to rest and refuel before they continue their long journey.

Some have traveled from as far as South America and all are headed north for breeding season in the high Arctic.

Their time here is short but critical.

Some birds stay only a few days and almost double their body weight feeding.

Disturbance by dogs & people interrupts their feeding and resting and can threaten their survival.

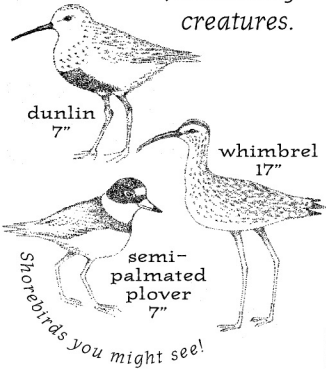

How can you help?

- Give shorebirds space, keep pets on a leash.
- Avoid approaching too closely – don't let 'em notice you!
- Use binoculars to get a closer look!

Spread the word.

Tell others about these fascinating creatures.

For more information:
Raincoast Interpretive Centre
451A Main St. Tofino
725-2560, res@island.net
www.raincoasteducation.org

Funding provided by:

Printed in Canada on Save-A-Tree® 100% post-consumer recycled paper.

BOOKMARK